INVITATION

CGS Indigenous Language Workshop

Re-introducing development of indigenous South African spoken language corpus

UNISA is committed to make resources available for the promotion & development of South African indigenous languages for the benefit of the University and the country. The Primary aim of the South African Spoken Language Corpus Project is the development of linguistic resources for South African languages in the form of electronically archived multimodal corpora of spoken language use. The project was initiated around 2000 by Linguistics department, as an inter-institutional project with Gothenburg University and the University of South Africa as the principal administrative institutions for the project. As a co-founder of the project, Professor Jens Allwood, a professor of linguistics and head of SCCIIL – interdisciplinary center, University of Gothenburg, is the keynote speaker of the day.
